

SATURDAY SELECTS

Week of April 26, 2021

by Monica Khemsurov

A weekly Saturday recap to share with you our favorite links, discoveries, exhibitions, and more from the past seven days. This week: Yves Klein-inspired mirrors by Ben and Aja Blanc, a multi-colored Dims chair remix by Dusen Dusen, and the latest purveyor of high-quality affordable art to catch our eye (above).

Exhibitions

How strange and beautiful are these paintings by London artist Yulia Iosilzon? The Brooklyn gallery Carvalho Park is currently hosting its second solo show of her work, now through next weekend, called A Chorus of Beauty and Menace. The works, made during lockdown, depict “an Arcadian playscape – a non-existent world hovering above the landscape and set amongst the clouds, of Iosilzon’s singular and emphatic vision.”